School Kitchen Conversion

Due to a need to improve their teaching facilities, this school decided to convert its current ICT suite into a classroom capable of carrying out cookery lessons. This school kitchen conversion entailed breaking out the school ground. We then installed new water and waste supplies to the block as it is separate from the main school building. As well as this installed a new electrical supply for a cooker and hob. We then had to install new kitchen units and worktops to suit the layout provided by the client. As it was not possible to relocate the main computer server, we were tasked with constructing a full height cupboard around it that also incorporated natural ventilation. This was to prevent the server from overheating.

The complete room was then decorated with all of the works completed early in the summer holidays. This gave the school plenty of time to prepare the room for the new term.
