Stable Block Conversion

This stable block conversion-involved converting two separate stable blocks into a single dwelling. We achieved this by forming a corridor between them. The works entailed renewing the external cladding, installing new timber windows as well as external doors. Solid insulation was used in the external walls, and a new insulated zinc roof containing roof lights was added. The installation of underfoor heating and a new kitchen and bathroom completed the project. The works were carried out to a high standard and the client was extremely happy with the end results.
