School Headteacher's New Office

This school headteacher's new office project was part of a larger scope of works. The head teacher required a new space for her office and the solution was to convert an existing toilet block. We completely ripped out the existing toilets and added a new entrance. The entrance extended into a main corridor to make a larger office. The main objective was to enhance the size of the office without excessively encroaching into the corridor. Additionally we completely plastered and decorated the office, fitted a new carpet and installed a new suspended ceiling. All of the work was carried out during normal school time and with little disruption thanks to excellent communication with the school.

Toilets

Additional works include the refurbishment of an existing toilet block from same sex to unisex toilets which consists of cubicles. Waller Building Services also added a-mezzanine floor to a school office to create more space.
